The "Ek Commando Knives" were designed for close quarters and were quickly adopted by the US Marine Raiders, US Army Rangers, First Special Service Force and Office of Strategic Services Operational Groups. Americans have since carried Ek Commando Knives in World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Afghanistan, Iraq and countless other locations in between.

As war raged in the Pacific Theater, many Marines' equipment succumbed to the harsh conditions of jungle warfare. Exposed to salt water, rain, extreme heat and humidity, some USMC KA-BAR handles were left devastated. Enter Eugene Stone, who created a mold to cast metallic handles for the knives, whose blades were still in excellent working order. Stone cast the handles from scrap material from a variety of downed Japanese aircraft.

THE KA-BAR STORY

The KA-BAR Story is a four episode documentary covering the first 120 years of KA-BAR history.

The documentary highlights the first years of KA-BAR including many important events for KA-BAR, including a move, leadership changes, the KA-BAR name, and the creation of our most famous knife, the turbulent period from the 1960s to 1990s and the return of KA-BAR to Olean, NY in the 1990s.

KA-BAR

Logos and imagery are an important part of the KA-BAR® story.

From the Dog's Head - which has been used since the early 20th Century, though for unknown reasons - to the iconic North American "The Union" shield, KA-BAR® has always had a strong visual presence.

The most famous is the "Kill A Bear" logo, which illustrates an important part of how KA-BAR® got its name.

KA-BAR continues to celebrate our 120th anniversary by offering this laser engraved commemorative knife that features our world famous brand name, "KA-BAR®", a roaming bear and "The Union" shield presented in a Victorian-era style logo.
